Mastering the Art of Approval: Your Ultimate Dragon Age Gift Giving Guide

In the rich, sprawling world of Dragon Age, your journey through Thedas is defined not only by the battles you fight and the choices you make, but also by the relationships you cultivate. Whether you are navigating the political intrigue of Dragon Age: Origins, the dark fantasy of Dragon Age II, or the epic landscapes of Dragon Age: Inquisition, one mechanic remains a cornerstone of character bonding: gift giving. A well-chosen present can unlock deep personal stories, earn fierce loyalty, and even open romantic options. A poorly chosen one, however, can sour a relationship before it has a chance to bloom. This comprehensive Dragon Age gift giving guidewill walk you through the nuances of pleasing your companions, ensuring your party stands united against any threat.

Why Gift Giving Matters in Dragon Age

Gift giving in Dragon Age is far more than a simple gameplay mechanic. It is a narrative tool that helps you peel back the layers of your companions. Each character comes with a unique history, personality, and set of values. By presenting them with a gift that aligns with their interests or past, you signal that you understand them. This act of understanding is central to earning companion approval. High approval unlocks personal quests, unique dialogue, and powerful combat bonuses. Conversely, ignoring a companion's interests or giving offensive gifts can lead to disapproval, potentially causing them to leave your party or even betray you. Mastering the Dragon Age gifting system is therefore essential for a fulfilling playthrough.

Dragon Age: Origins – Classic Gifts for Classic Heroes

The game that started it all, Dragon Age: Origins, features a straightforward but rewarding approval system. Each companion has specific tastes, and knowing what to give them can turn a tense alliance into a lifelong friendship. Here is a Dragon Age gift guide for the core companions of Ferelden.

Alistair, the charming and slightly awkward Grey Warden, has a soft spot for items that remind him of his lost youth and simpler times. He appreciates humor and sentimentality. To win his favor, look for:Dragon Age gift ideas for Alistair:The "Small Nug" or "Alistair's Mother's Amulet" are key items. He also enjoys "Black Licorice Sticks" and "Mabari Biscuits." Avoid giving him anything that feels dark or morbid, as he prefers light-hearted keepsakes.

Morrigan is a complex character who values knowledge, power, and independence. She has little patience for sentimentality or religious icons. Your Dragon Age gift guide for her should focus on the arcane and the natural. Best gifts for Morrigan:The "Gold Amulet" and "Black Diamond" are excellent choices. She also loves "Flemeth's Grimoire" and "The Fade's Sequence." Gifts related to Chantry or Andraste will earn you a sharp rebuke.

Leliana is a romantic and a woman of faith. She appreciates beauty, artistry, and tokens that remind her of her past as a bard in Orlais. To charm Leliana, you must appeal to her senses and her spirituality.Dragon Age companion gifts for Leliana:She adores "Andraste's Grace" (a flower), "The Rose of Orlais," and "The Chant of Light." A "Nug's Paw" might be amusing, but focus on the elegant and the devout.

Sten is a warrior of the Qun, and his values are built on duty, order, and purpose. He does not understand frivolity. Your guide to Dragon Age gifts for Sten must be practical and symbolic of strength.What to give Sten:The "Sword of the Beresaad" is his most prized gift. He also appreciates "A New Sword" and "The Gifts of the Qun."

Avoid giving him food, drink, or anything he might consider trivial or decadent.

Oghren is a straightforward dwarf with a love for ale, combat, and stories of valor. He is easy to please if you know his simple tastes. A Dragon Age gift giving guide for Oghren is all about the basics.Dragon Age gifts for Oghren:"Ale" of any kind is a surefire winner. "The Love of a Good Woman" (a book) and "The Poem of the Grey Wardens" also score high points.

Dragon Age II – Gifts for a City's Champions

In Dragon Age II, the city of Kirkwall is a crucible of conflict, and your companions are some of the most memorable in the series. Gift giving here is tied closely to their personal struggles and ambitions. This Dragon Age II gift guide will help you navigate the friendships of Hawke's inner circle.

Varric is a merchant prince, a rogue, and a master storyteller. He values cleverness, humor, and, above all, a good story. He is also a loyal friend who appreciates loyalty in return.Dragon Age gift guide for Varric: The "Diamond" is an excellent gift that he acknowledges with genuine appreciation. "The Merchant's Guild Ledger" and "A Nice Painting" are also good choices. He enjoys gifts that reflect his dwarven heritage and his love for narrative.

Isabela is a free-spirited rogue who loves adventure, treasure, and pleasure. She is greedy but also has a hidden depth. Your Dragon Age gifting guide for her should focus on luxury and freedom.Best gifts for Isabela:She loves "The Siren's Call," "The Book of Qunari Poetry," and "A Bottle of Antivan Brandy." Gems and jewels, as well as maps to buried treasure, will always catch her eye.

Fenris is a tormented elf with lyrium tattoos and a deep hatred for mages and slavery. He is difficult to please because of his trauma. A Dragon Age gift guide for Fenris requires patience and empathy.Dragon Age companion gifts for Fenris:He values "The Gift of the People" and "A Silverite Ingot." Gifts that remind him of his former master or that promote magical freedom will deeply offend him.

Merrill is a sweet-natured but dangerously curious Dalish elf who experiments with blood magic to restore her people's lost history. She values knowledge, nature, and her clan's heritage.What to give Merrill:She deeply appreciates any piece of "Dalish Paraphernalia," "A Fennec Carcass," or "The Eluvian." She loves things that are connected to her history or are simply beautiful.

Aveline is a no-nonsense warrior dedicated to justice and order. She is grieving her late husband and is somewhat awkward in social situations. Your Dragon Age gift giving guide for her should be practical and sincere.Gifts for Aveline:"The Book of Poetry" is a surprisingly touching gift. "A Shield" and "A Steaming Pile of Halla Droppings" (for her horse) are also well-received. Avoid anything overly romantic or frivolous.

Dragon Age: Inquisition – The Power of Influence

Dragon Age: Inquisition expands the gift giving system into a broader influence mechanic. While many gifts are now tied to War Table missions and fetch quests, the emotional impact of a personalized present remains potent. This Dragon Age: Inquisition gift guide covers the key members of your inner circle.

Cassandra is a warrior of faith, but she also has a secret love for romantic literature. She is strong-willed, just, and deeply devoted to her duty. To earn her respect and friendship, you need to show strength and understanding. Dragon Age gift ideas for Cassandra:The "Seeker of Truth" manuscript is her most iconic gift. She also appreciates "Snoufleur Skins" for her crafting. Gifts that acknowledge her faith or her secret love for smutty novels will delight her.

Solas is a mysterious and highly intelligent elven mage with deep knowledge of the Fade and the ancient world. He values wisdom, history, and freedom of spirit. A Dragon Age gift guide for Solas is an exercise in intellectualism. Best gifts for Solas:Give him "Fen'Harel's Banner" or "Dirthamen's Secret" to spark his interest. He also enjoys "Elven Artifacts" and "Hardened Silverite." Avoid gifts that glorify the Chantry or modern Orlesian culture.

Iron Bull is a Qunari mercenary who lives for battle, sex, and good drink. He is surprisingly perceptive and values honesty above all else. Your Dragon Age companion gifts for Bull should be big and bold.What to give Iron Bull: He loves "The Horn of Valhalla" and "Inquisitor's Favorite" (a drink). "Vitaar" for his horns is also a great choice. Anything that is powerful, practical, or associated with combat will earn his approval.

Dorian is a charismatic and witty mage from the Tevinter Imperium. He values intelligence, charm, and a sense of style. He also carries deep pain regarding his family. To win his heart, you need to show him you accept him for who he is.Dragon Age gifts for Dorian:The "Pendant of Pavus" is a deeply personal and important gift. "The Perfectly Spiced Wine" and "Imperial Vestments" are also excellent. He appreciates gifts that are elegant and refined.

Sera is a chaotic and rebellious elf who hates pointless rules and powerful people. She loves pranks, cookies, and sticking it to the establishment. A Dragon Age gifting guide for Sera should be fun and irreverent.Best gifts for Sera:"The Gift of the People" is a perfect choice. She also loves "The Elven Nut" and "A Barrel of Cookies." Avoid anything too serious, magical, or elven-focused.

Blackwall is a stoic and honorable Grey Warden (or so he appears) who values duty, honor, and redemption. He has a strong sense of justice and a fondness for woodcarving.Gifts for Blackwall:He deeply appreciates "The Joining Kit" and "The Grey Warden Banner." "A Fine Woodcarving Tool" is also a thoughtful gift. Anything tied to the ideals of the Grey Wardens will resonate with him.

General Tips for a Successful Dragon Age Gift Giving Guide

To truly master the art of gift giving in Dragon Age, keep these general strategies in mind:

- Pay Attention to Dialogue: Your companions often drop hints about what they like or dislike in casual conversation. Listen carefully.
- Explore Everywhere: Many unique gifts are hidden in chests, found on enemies, or purchased from specialized merchants. Thorough exploration is key.
- Don't Hoard Gifts: Use gifts early to build approval and unlock personal quests. Waiting too long can make the story feel disconnected.
- Consider the Recipient's Background: A gift that means nothing to one character might be a treasured memory to another. Think about their race, class, and personal history.
